

Appendix I. Southern African Stone Age Collections in the Department of Ethnography of The British Museum

Introduction

This Appendix is organized following the same broad geographical divisions as used in the Gazetteer, that is to say first by country and then, within South Africa, by province. Old spellings are given in brackets and italics after the modern place-name and where a site can be located within a modern province in Mozambique or Zimbabwe this follows the placename. As these collections were not examined, only brief details of their contents are included, taken from the print-out of the department's registers provided by Julie Hudson of the British Museum's Department of Ethnography, to whom I am grateful. For those who wish to follow the activities of a particular collector a list of collectors with names of sites from which they collected follows at the end of the Appendix.

Appendix 2. Other African Stone Age Archaeological Collections in The British Museum

Karen Perkins

Introduction

This appendix is organised on geographical lines using the political boundaries of African states as they existed on January 1st 1999. Within each country provenances are listed alphabetically with the name of the department, province or region in which they are located following immediately afterwards in parantheses. The second column gives the name of the collection and the third the registration or catalogue number. For those who wish to follow the activities of a particular collector a list of collectors with names of sites from which they collected follows at the end of the Appendix. As noted in the introduction, this does not include Egyptian material, while all items listed as coming from the Musée d'Histoire Naturelle, Paris, are casts.

Appendix 3. Stone Age Archaeological Collections from Southern Africa in other Museums in the United Kingdom

Alison Roberts

Introduction

This Appendix lists briefly the southern Stone Age collections held by other museums in the United Kingdom. It is arranged alphabetically by country and, within South Africa, by province following the same order as the Gazetteer, though Angola, Botswana and Mozambique are all unrepresented. Within each country or province collections are listed alphabetically according to institution and then by site. Information on the names of the collections is as supplied by the host institution. Site names have been modernized where necessary, with the original spelling placed in italics within parentheses. A summary list of donors is included, which indicates the museum(s) in which their collection is located and if they are also represented in the PEE collections which are the subject of this Catalogue. The Appendix was completed in 1996, and since then the transfer to PEE of all of the collections listed here as belonging to the Institute of Archaeology has been completed (P1989.1-4).

Appendix 4. Individual Collectors Represented in The British Museum Southern African Stone Age Collections

Dr Alan Cohen

Introduction

This Appendix gives biographical information on those individuals who contributed to the British Museum's Department of Prehistory and Early Europe (PEE) collections of Stone Age artefacts from southern Africa. All contributing collectors are listed alphabetically with dates of birth and death where known, followed by the provenances from which they collected material; provenances are spelt following the format used in the Gazetteer (Chapter 5) and can be located within it using the Concordance at its beginning. Further biographical information follows, emphasizing the southern African and/or archaeological connections of the individuals concerned. Where appropriate, key references are given from which further information can be obtained.

To check if a particular individual also contributed to the southern African Stone Age collections of the British Museum's Department of Ethnography reference should be made to the list of collectors at the end of Appendix 1. Similar lists for collectors of other African material held by PEE, and for collectors of Southern African material held at other museums in Britain are included in Appendices 2 and 3 respectively.

Anderson, Andrew A. before 1845 - after 1896

Sites: Auob River; Barkly West; Boataname; Boshof; Botswana, no further provenance; Bubi River; Campbell; Carmarło Drift; Chue Pan; Cubango River; Damaraland; Dwarsberg; Freevast; Gaseitšive's Country; Great Fish River; Griquatown; Great Salt Pan (Montshiwa); Hakskeenpan; Harts River; Kalahari Desert; Khama's Country; Kheis; Kimberley; Kimberley (Du Toits Pan); Klip Drift; Kuruman; Lake Ngami; Langeberg; Limpopo River; Matabeleland; Molapo River; Molepolole; Mpakwe River; Ngotwane River; Nossob River; Owambo; Shoshong; Sivonel; Spitskop; Steenbokpan (Steinbok Farm); Steenbokpan (Steinbok Pan); Swartmodder; Swartmodder ?; Tati Goldfields; Tati River; Tonga River; Transvaal, no further provenance; Vaal River; Witwater.

Born in Scotland, Anderson emigrated to South Africa and from 1860 travelled extensively in the interior of the sub-continent, including Namibia, Botswana and western Zimbabwe, where he visited King Lobengula of the Matabele in 1878. The following year he fought in the Zulu War and was then briefly in Pretoria, living in England between 1884 and 1888; it was during this period (October 20th 1885) that his collections were purchased for the Christy Collection. He left South Africa in 1890 to retire to Britain.

Little else is known of him, beyond what he published in two accounts of his travels (A.A. Anderson 1887a, 1887b). Both include references to the collection of stone artefacts from across the northern half of the sub-continent, as well as observations on ruined stone-walled enclosures of Iron Age date. Collecting stone artefacts as early as 1859, he was among the first to do so anywhere in southern Africa (D. Morris 1997). The Royal Geographical Society published his map of South Africa c. 1885. A collection of his water-colours is housed in the Africana Museum in Johannesburg (Kennedy 1963) with smaller collections in the Libraries of the South African Parliament, Cape Town, and the Royal Commonwealth Society, London. Some, such as those of Kora encampments on the farm Rooipoort (qv) in the Northern Cape Province, are of considerable ethnohistoric importance (D. Morris 1995).

Armstrong, Albert L. 1878-1958

Sites: Alexandersfontein; Bambata Cave; Barkly West; De Kiel Oost; Fish Hoek; Gokomere Cave; Gumali Cave; Gweru Kopje; Harare; Hope Fountain; Inyanga; Inyati; Jacobsdal; Kimberley; Leeuwfontein; Nswatugi Cave; Paardeberg; Petrus; Plumtree; Pommeru; Pommeru (Grave Site); Pommeru; Sawmills; Taung; Westacre Farm; Zimbabwe, no further provenance.

Born in England, Armstrong first worked as an art teacher and then as a surveyor and valuer. He became interested in archaeology while serving in Egypt during the First World War. He took a leading part in the excavation of a Neolithic flint mine at Grimes Graves, Norfolk, in 1920-24 and also excavated Upper Palaeolithic cave sites at Creswell Crags, Derbyshire. He directed the Rhodesian Archaeological Expedition of 1929, which formed part of the activities associated with the visit to southern Africa of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, publishing the results of his excavations at Bambata Cave two years later (Armstrong 1931). A second report on the Expedition's results was published in 1936 (Armstrong et al. 1936). Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries.

Additional information Obituary in Transactions of the Hunter Archaeological Society, vol. 8 (1963).

Atherstone, Hon. William G. 1814-1898

Sites: Bushman's River (Eastern Cape); Cape Flats; East London; Keiskamma River; Kleinemonde; Orange River.

Born in England, Atherstone's family were among the 1820 English settlers in the Eastern Cape Province. Having studied widely in Europe, he returned to South Africa to practise as a doctor, including a spell as a military surgeon in the Frontier Wars. In addition to pioneering the use of anaesthetics in the Cape Colony, he had extensive interests in botany and geology, founding the Grahamstown Botanical Gardens and the Scientific and Literary Society, the eventual ancestor of the Albany Museum. Among other claims to fame, he was the person to identify as such the first diamond found in South Africa, became a member of the Cape Colony's House of Assembly in 1881 and was Honorary President of the South African Association for the Advancement of Science at its first meeting in 1896. Linked by marriage with T. H. Bowker and J. H. Bowker, he was also associated with Dr D. Kannemeyer (1890), author of an important early work on southern African stone artefacts, and A.G. Bain. Fellow of the Geological Society.

Avebury, Lord (Lubbock, Sir John) 1834-1913

Sites: Buffalo River; East London

Lubbock inherited a bank from his father at the age of 14 and gave up a formal education in order to become involved in its management. He served on several financial commissions before entering the House of Commons as Member of Parliament for Maidstone in 1874. He sat as Member of Parliament for the University of London after 1880, having been elected as its Vice-Chancellor in 1872. He was a close friend of Charles Darwin and Sir Augustus Franks and son-in-law of General Pitt-Rivers, as well as an important figure in the development of archaeology and anthropology in his own right, serving as President of the Society of Antiquaries of London and of the Anthropological Institute. His chief work Pre-Historical Times (Lubbock 1865) ran through several editions until 1913 and was the major English language introductory text to prehistoric archaeology of its time. In it he coined the terms Palaeolithic and Neolithic. Raised to the Peerage in 1900, he was responsible for the introduction of bank holidays and Britain's first antiquities protection legislation (the 1882 Ancient Monuments Act). He published several papers on stone implements from Africa (1869, 1870a, 1870b, 1871).

Additional information Dictionary of National Biography of the Twentieth Century, 1912-1921, pp. 345-347; Hutchinson (1914).

Ayres, Thomas

Sites: Rustenburg

Feilden (1883: 163) records that he acquired a group of five artefacts from a Mr Thomas Ayres of Potchefstroom who had collected them near Rustenburg. Only one of these artefacts is now in the British Museum collections and the whereabouts of the others are unknown. No further information has been obtained as to the identity of Mr Ayres, though A.A. Anderson's (1887b:160) reference to seeing 'very good stone implements in the possession of a medical gentleman' when he visited Potchefstroom in 1865 might be connected.

Bain, Andrew G. 1797-1864

Sites: Kleinemonde.

Born in Scotland, Bain arrived in South Africa in 1816 and explored parts of the Northern Cape Province and Botswana in 1825-26 and Pondoland (now in the Eastern Cape Province) in 1829 (Bain 1949). He served in the Colonial forces during the Sixth Frontier War of 1834-35 and in 1837 was attached to the Royal Engineers as a supervisor for the construction of military roads. He subsequently oversaw the construction of several important roads that tied the Cape Colony together, including that between Ceres and Wellington which passes through Bainskloof, named after him. Generally recognised as the father of South African geology, he compiled the first geological map of the country and was the first to discover the fossil remains of mammal-like reptiles in the rocks of the Karoo System. Associated with Sir C. Lyell and friend of W.G. Atherstone. Fellow of the Geological Society.

Additional information Hockly (1966); Dictionary of South African Biography 1: 35-38.

Bays, Dr. J. Bruce

Sites: Halseton.

Bays qualified in medicine in London in 1887 and remained on the British Medical Register until 1957, when he was living in East London, Eastern Cape Province. He is known to have met Miles Burkitt during the latter's visit to South Africa in 1927.

Bazley, William d. 1908

Sites: Alfred County Cave.

Vinnicombe (1976: 112) records that Bazley first farmed, unsuccessfully, in the Richmond area of KwaZulu-Natal and later moved to the coast. There he worked as a surveyor and engineer in the construction of the harbour at Port Shepstone, quarried marble and built the road linking Port Shepstone to Harding (magisterial seat of Alfred County). He retired in January 1904 and died four years later. Correspondent of Sir C.H. Read.

Bird, P. C.

Sites: Trelawney.

The only information obtained about Mr Bird indicates that he was living in Essex at the time of his donation of the Trelawney artefacts to the British Museum and subsequently moved to the village of Assington, where he is buried.

Bowker, James H. Colonel 1822-1900

Sites: Rorke's Drift.

Born in England, Bowker's family were among the 1820 Settlers and were granted a farm at Tharfield in the then Albany District of the Cape Colony. Having fought in the Frontier Wars of 1846 and 1850-53, Bowker was appointed commandant of the Frontier Armed and Mounted Police left in occupation of Xhosa lands in the eastern part of what is now the Eastern Cape Province. He continued in this position until 1866, held several other Government appointments and then became High Commissioner of Basutoland on its annexation to the Cape Colony in 1868. As well as conducting excavations (sadly unrecorded as far as is known) in rock-shelters in Lesotho, Bowker was also an entomologist and botanist of some note and was in KwaZulu-Natal in 1879 during the Zulu War where he collected stone artefacts at Rorke's Drift. Associated with Sir C. Lyell. Brother of T. H. Bowker.

Additional information Gooch (1881); Hockly (1966).

Bowker, Thomas H. Commandant 1808-1885

Sites: probable source of the material donated by Grey from Tharfield.

Born in England, Bowker's family were among the 1820 Settlers and were granted a farm at Tharfield in the then Albany District of the Cape Colony. He served in the Colonial military forces in the Frontier Wars of the 1828 to 1853 period, was Resident Magistrate of the Kat River settlement in 1848 and was the founder of Queenstown, now an important town in the northern part of the Eastern Cape Province. Bowker represented Albany and later Queenstown in the Cape Colony's House of Assembly and served in Kimberley as Secretary to the Land Commission on the Diamond Fields in 1872. He was one of South Africa's first antiquarians, collecting stone artefacts from several localities in the Eastern Cape Province, some of which were later presented to the Rotunda Museum of Artillery in Woolwich (now at the Albany Museum, Grahamstown).

Additional information Goodwin (1955); Hewitt (1955); Hockly (1966).

Braunholtz, Hermann J. 1888-1963

Sites: Alexandersfontein; Avalon; Barkly West; Bloemhof; Brakfontein; Canteen Kopje; Cape Flats; Christiana (Showlands Kopje); De Kiel Oost; Fauresmith (Factory site); Fauresmith (Town Spruit site); Hope Fountain; Koffiefontein (Engravings Site); Koffiefontein (Sekretaris Kop); Lockshoek; Mauchini Brook; Milnerton-Maitland; Nootgedacht; Pniel; Powola Brook; Skildegat Cave; Stellenbosch; Stellenbosch (Lorraine Farm); Ventershoek (Christol Cave); Ventershoek (Talus below Christol Cave); Ventershoek (west of Christol Cave); Vereeniging; Zimbabwe, no further provenance.

Born in England and educated at Cambridge, Braunholtz began work at the British Museum in 1913 and had a distinguished career there as an ethnographer, becoming Keeper of the Department of Oriental Antiquities and Ethnography in 1938, and then Keeper of the newly created Department of Ethnography from 1945-53. He also served three terms as President of the Royal Anthropological Institute (1926-35, 1937-39, 1941-43). Visited Southern Africa for the meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science in 1929.

Additional information Who Was Who 6: 130.

Brown, Horace L.

Sites: Beyers Kloof Farm.

The only information available about Mr Brown is that he was living in Kensington at the time of his donation of the Beyers Kloof Farm implements to the British Museum in 1921.

Busk, Charles J.

Sites: Cape Flats.

Mr Busk was a resident of Cape Town and associate of Rev. L. Dale and George McKay. Little is known about him, except by reference to his brother, the eminent surgeon and palaeontologist George Busk (1807-1886). At the 1868 International Congress of Prehistoric Archaeology at Norwich, George Busk exhibited stone implements sent from South Africa by his brother, Charles, and the Rev. Langham Dale. These implements were presented via George Busk to the Christy Collection at the British Museum in 1869.

Christy, Henry 1810-1865

Sites: Auob River; Boatlaname; Boshof; Botswana, no further provenance; Bubi River; Buffalo River; Bushmans River; Campbell; Cape Flats; Cape of Good Hope; Carmarło Drift; Chue Pan; Cubango River; Damaraland; Dwarsberg; East London; East London, (British Kaffraria); Estcourt; Freevast; Gaseitise's Country; Grahamstown; Great Fish River; Great Salt Pan; Griqualand West; Griquatown; Hakskeenpan; Harts River; Hout Bay; Isandhlwana; Kaffirland (sic); Kalahari Desert; Keiskamma River; Khama's Country; Kheis; Kimberley; Kimberley (Du Toits Pan); Kimberley (Sluits); Kleinemonde; Klip Drift; Kuruman; Lake Ngami; Langeberg; Lesotho, no further provenance; Limpopo River; Matabeleland, no further provenance; Molapo River; Molopolole; Natal, no further provenance; Newcastle; Ngotwane River; Nossob River; Orange River; Owambo; Pietermaritzburg; Port Beaufort; Pretoria; Prieska; Rustenburg; Rorke's Drift; Sivonel; South Africa, no further provenance; Spitskop; Steenbokpan (Steinbok Farm); Steenbokpan (Steinbok Pan); Swartmodder; Swartmodder ?; The Curragh; Tonga River; Transvaal, no further provenance; Vaal River; Vogelstruisfontein Farm; Witwater; Zululand, no further provenance.

Born in London, Christy took over and further developed his father's millinery company in Stockport and expanded his fortune by introducing Turkish towelling to Britain and by inheriting a joint stock bank. While travelling for business reasons he amassed a huge ethnographic collection and by 1863 was so interested in the problem of human antiquity and the possibility of human evolution that he financed the excavations of the eminent French palaeontologist Edouard Lartet. Several of these excavations were at caves in the Dordogne region of France, including several (such as Laugerie Haute, La Madeleine and Le Moustier) that became classic sites for the European Upper Palaeolithic (Lartet & Christy 1865-75). After Christy's death Sir Augustus Franks was responsible for adding to his collection and money left by Christy for this purpose permitted the acquisition of Stone Age material that might not otherwise have been acquired in competition with more glamorous material for Museum funding.

Additional information Dictionary of National Biography, pp. 295-296.

Collins, Colonel E. R. born 1870, died after 1935

Sites: Burgersdorp; Devondale Sidings; Doornlaagte; Klerksdorp; Meyerton; Palmietpan; Panfontein; Riversdale Farm; Vereeniging.

A major in the Second South African War of 1899-1902, Collins was a career Army officer who went on to fight in the First World War. Some of the finds made during his military service in South Africa were later donated to the British Museum and published (Collins & Smith 1919). His archaeological interests later saw him become (in 1919) a member of the Prehistoric Society of East Anglia.

Cookson, H.

Sites: Muden.

The only information available about Mr Cookson is that he was living in Natal at the time of the donation of the material from Muden in 1955. The donation was arranged with the assistance of the archaeologist Robert S. Newall (1884-1978), excavator of Stonehenge with Colonel Hawley and long-time supporter of Salisbury Museum.

Cranswick, Rev. Rupert L. 1894-1978

Sites: Plumtree.

An Anglican priest, Cranswick was ordained in 1924 and became Curate of the Church of St. John the Baptist in Bulawayo in 1926, before becoming Vicar of Plumtree and Chaplain of Plumtree School between 1930 and 1937. He subsequently served in a variety of localities within Zimbabwe, before retiring as Honorary Canon of Mashonaland from 1961 to 1967.

Additional information Who Was Who 7: 180.

Dale, Rev. Dr Sir Langham 1826-1894

Sites: Cape Flats; East London.

Graduating from Oxford in 1848, Dale was offered the Chair of Classics and English Literature at the South African College, Cape Town in the same year. He played a highly important role in the development of education in the Cape Colony, serving as Superintendent-General of Education from 1859 to 1881 and being instrumental in the passage of the 1865 Education Act, which made English the medium of instruction in state schools. He campaigned for the establishment of a university and became Vice-Chancellor when the South African College developed into the University of Cape Town in 1873; he was elected Chancellor in 1892. In addition to collecting stone artefacts, he also published on the South African Stone Age (Dale 1870a, 1870b, 1871). He presented material to the British Museum both directly and via George Busk.

Additional information Dictionary of South African Biography 1: 201-204; Goodwin (1928).

De Villiers, Roland

Sites: Paarl.

The only information available about Master De Villiers is that his objects from Paarl were donated to the British Museum in 1930 through David De Villiers of Keurfontein, North Paarl.

Du Toit, Alexander L. 1878-1948

Sites: Karrieput.

Educated in Cape Town, Du Toit graduated in mining engineering at the Royal Technical College, Glasgow and studied geology at the Royal College of Science, London, before being appointed lecturer in geology at both institutions in 1901. Returning to South Africa two years later he joined the Cape Colony's geological commission and surveyed much of the Karoo, Transkei and KwaZulu-Natal, establishing himself as an authority on both the geology and palaeontology of South Africa. Joining the Transvaal Geological Survey in 1912, he then became consulting geologist for De Beers in 1927, retiring to Cape Town in 1947. Author of numerous geological papers, he was successively President of the Geological Society of South Africa, the South African Association for the Advancement of Science and the South African Archaeological Society, as well as a Fellow of the Royal Society.

Additional information Dictionary of South African Biography 1: 266-268.

Dunn, Edward J. 1844-1937

Sites: Griquatown

Born in Britain, Dunn emigrated to Australia in 1849 and qualified there as a mining surveyor. He came to South Africa in 1871 as government geologist of the Cape Colony and played a role in the development of the Kimberley diamond mines and subsequently the goldfields of the Rand. Principally a collector of ethnographic material from southern Africa, Dunn also collected and wrote about stone artefacts, mostly in the Karoo and on the Cape Peninsula (Dunn 1880, 1908, 1931). Returning to Australia in 1886 he took most of his southern African collection with him, although much of this subsequently came into the possession of the Pitt Rivers Museum, Oxford. Fellow of the Geological Society, and recipient of the Murchison Medal in 1905.

Additional information Dictionary of South African Biography 2: 204-205.

Edwards, Wilfred N. Dr 1890-1956.

Sites: Khami.

Educated at Cambridge, Edwards was a palaeobotanist and historian of geology who worked at The Natural History Museum between 1913 and 1955, ending his career as Keeper of Geology. His wideranging researches on fossil plants spanned the globe from New Zealand to Greenland.

Additional information Proceedings of the Geological Society of London 1554: 142-144.

Elliott, Clarence 1881-1969

Sites: Simondium (Vriedeslust Farm)

British by birth, Elliott spent only three years in South Africa, working as a fruit farmer near Paarl from 1902 to 1905. He then returned to Britain, setting up the Six Hills Nursery in Stevenage, which became world famous for its alpine and rockery plants, many of which he collected in the course of numerous expeditions to the Mediterranean, South America and elsewhere. He sold several artefacts to the British Museum in 1906, although his name is incorrectly recorded in the Accession Register as 'Charles Elliott'. He sold the remainder of his collection to Dr W. A. Sturge in 1908.

Additional information Who Was Who 6: 346; Letters in Sturge archive.

Evans, John Sir 1823-1908

Sites: Port Beaufort.

A businessman and owner of a paper mill in Hemel Hempstead, Evans developed an interest in geology and fossil collecting at an early age. A close friend of Sir Augustus Franks, in 1858 he joined with Sir Joseph Prestwich to investigate the claims made by the French antiquarian Boucher de Perthes for the antiquity and contemporaneity of stone artefacts and the bones of extinct animal species at sites in the Somme gravels (Daniel 1975). Confirmation of these claims was instrumental in demonstrating that the origins of humanity lay in a period far beyond the traditional Bible-derived time-frame. Evans combined his geological and Palaeolithic interests with the study of Celtic coinage, stone tools, and late prehistoric metalwork, producing the standard texts of his time on these aspects of British archaeology (i.e. Evans 1864, 1872, 1881, 1898). Among other offices he held, he was President of the Numismatic Society of London (1872-1908), Vice-President of the Anthropological Society of Great Britain and Ireland (1897) and Treasurer of the Royal Society (1878-98), as well as a Trustee of the British Museum.

Additional information Dictionary of National Biography Supplement, pp. 634-637; Evans (1943).

Exton, Hugh Dr 1833-1903

Sites: Lesotho, no further provenance.

Born in England, Exton emigrated to the Cape Colony in 1861 and practised briefly as a doctor in Grahamstown before travelling in Botswana where he collected birds, later publishing on the anthropology and ornithology of the area in the Cape Monthly Magazine. He moved to Bloemfontein in 1870 and worked there as a doctor, also serving as Mayor between 1881 and 1883. He was instrumental in establishing the National Museum and was its Honorary Curator from 1877. He moved to Johannesburg in 1888, but served as a doctor on the British side during the Second South African War (1899-1902). He was the first President of the South African Geological Society and also a President of the South African Medical Society.

Additional information Dictionary of South African Biography 3: 282.

Favell, Dr Richard V. 1881-1936

Sites: Gokomere Cave; Gweru Kopje; Hope Fountain; Inyati; Nswatugi Cave; Sawmills; Taung.

English by birth, Favell was a doctor who retired to Cornwall in 1924 where he became a member of the County Council and served as High Sheriff in 1934. He was closely associated with A. L. Armstrong, working with him not only at Grimes Graves and in Derbyshire, but also on the Rhodesian Archaeological Expedition of 1929. They were elected at the same time (March 5th 1925) and on the nomination of the same individuals as Fellows of the Society of Antiquaries of London.

Additional information Obituary in Proceedings of the Prehistoric Society (1936) p. 261.

Feilden, Colonel Henry W. 1838-1921

Sites: Buffalo River; Estcourt; Isandhlwana; Natal, no further provenance; Newcastle; Pietermaritzburg; Rustenburg; Zululand, no further provenance.

A career soldier, Feilden saw service in the Indian Mutiny (1857-58), the Second Opium War (1860) and the American Civil War (on the Confederate side, 1862-65), before fighting in both the First and Second South African Wars (1881, 1900-02). The majority of his South African collections were made in 1881 (Feilden 1883), although collections (not in the British Museum) made from the Cape Flats were the result of his second South African posting as Paymaster of the Imperial Yeomanry in 1900-02. He subsequently travelled in both the Northern Cape Province and Zimbabwe, and was the first person to draw attention to the presence of stone artefacts in the gravels of the Zambezi River above and below Victoria Falls (Feilden 1905). The breadth of his interests are indicated by the fact that he served as a naturalist on the British Polar Expedition of 1875-76 and travelled widely in the Arctic, as well as by his observation that nineteenth-century Bushmen made use of abandoned sodawater bottles to make stone artefacts (Feilden 1883). In addition to the British Museum, he also donated archaeological material from Southern Africa to Norwich Museum (now at Liverpool Museum) and Cambridge A & E.

Fisher, B. B.

Sites: Meyerton.

Probably Mr Bernard Fisher, his association with Southern Africa is unknown.

Frames, Minett E. 1862-1923

Sites: The Curragh.

Born in Port Elizabeth, South Africa, Frames was a mining engineer who worked in South Africa and Kenya, before dying during a surveying expedition in Angola. He excavated The Curragh Cave in the Drakensberg Mountains of KwaZulu-Natal of which he published a brief account (Frames 1898). Associated with G.W. Lamplugh. Fellow of the Geological Society.

Frere, Sir H. Bartle E. 1815-1884.

Sites: Kaffirland [sic]; Kalahari Desert.

A grandson of John Frere of early antiquarian fame (Daniel 1975), Frere entered the Indian Civil Service in 1834, becoming Governor of Bombay between 1862 and 1867 and Special Commissioner to East Africa in 1873 with a remit to negotiate the abolition of the slave trade with the Sultan of Zanzibar. He was appointed Governor of the Cape Colony and British High Commissioner in South Africa in 1877 by Disraeli's Conservative Government and was charged by the Colonial Office with the task of uniting the British colonies and the independent Boer republics within a British controlled federation. Partly to acquire Boer support for this idea, he provoked war with the Zulu in 1879, a war which began disastrously for the British with the destruction of a large part of Lord Chelmsford's army at Isandhlwana and the death of the Prince Imperial, heir to the exiled Bonaparte Dynasty of France. Though the Zulu were defeated in 1880, Frere was recalled to London the same year. As well as the evidence of the ethnographic and archaeological collections that he made and which were subsequently donated to the British Museum, his wider interests are demonstrated by his Presidency of the Asiatic Society in 1872 and the Geographical Society in 1873.

Frylinck, Carel P. M. 1896-?

Sites: Hartebeestfontein; Roedtan.

A mining engineer of Dutch ancestry working in the then northern Transvaal, Frylinck had studied in the Netherlands before returning to South Africa. He subsequently worked briefly in Indonesia (then the Dutch East Indies), before settling in Holland.

Fuller, Capt. A. W. F.

Sites: Barkly West; Bloemhof.

Very little is known about Captain Fuller, except that he was living in London SW2 at the time of the purchase of the material by the British Museum in 1930. The purchase included both archaeological and ethnographic material and is noted as having been 'collected by HJB' (perhaps Hermann J. Braunholtz). How Fuller obtained the material is unclear.

Gardner, Rev. Fr. Thomas I. 1866-1944

Sites: Driefontein; Gokomere Cave.

Born in England, Gardner was ordained as a priest of the Society of Jesus in 1899 and shortly thereafter (1902) was posted to Bulawayo to teach at St. George's School. He subsequently worked at several other missions in Zimbabwe, including that at Gokomere near Masvingo (formerly Fort Victoria). Having explored archaeological sites while training as a Jesuit in north Wales, he went on to carry out some of the earliest archaeological excavations in Zimbabwe. He was close friends with Father Philip Stapleton, another amateur archaeologist, who himself taught at St. George's College, Harare, between 1929 and 1938 and who had previously been based in Grahamstown, where he had collaborated with John Hewitt.

Goldsmid, Albert E. W. Colonel 1846-1904

Sites: South Africa, no further provenance.

Goldsmid served on the British Army's General Staff, taking part in the Second South African War of 1899-1902 as Assistant Adjutant General of the Sixth Division. He fought at the Battle of Paardeberg in 1900.

Gordon, Sir Home Seton 1845-1906

Sites: Bulataga; Francistown Kopje; Gungwe Kopje; Ingwe River Farm 103; Makgadikgadi Pans; Nata River; Ramatlabama; Sekonje River; Senyowe Drift; Tati River; Tshesebe; Vukwe Drift.

Gordon was trained at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, and served briefly with the 44th East Essex Regiment of Foot, and later with the Royal Glamorgan Light Infantry Militia. He travelled extensively throughout the world, including Africa. His collection of material from the 'Tati Territory' (Botswana) was donated to the British Museum by his son (also H. S. Gordon) in 1934. A detailed contemporary plan of the Tati Territory showing location of farms and acreage of plots of land accompanied the donation (Ethno Doc 80).

Grey, Sir George 1812-1898

Sites: Cape Flats; Tharfield.

Grey was one of the most distinguished British colonial administrators of the Nineteenth Century, being appointed Governor of South Australia in 1840 the year after he sold his army commission. He subsequently served as Governor of New Zealand (1846-53), Governor of the Cape Colony (1854-61) and once more as Governor of New Zealand (1861-68). After spending part of his retirement in Britain, he returned to New Zealand and became Prime Minister in 1877, an office he held for two years. He continued to serve in the New Zealand House of Representatives until 1893 when he finally returned to England. He published an article on stone tools in 1869.

Hall, J. C. F.

Sites: Mavoio.

Hardy, Colonel W. E. 1866-1959

Sites: Fish Hoek; Noordhoek.

Born in Britain and qualifying as a doctor in 1888, Hardy was commissioned into the Royal Army Medical Corps in 1891 and served as a medical officer in the Second South African War (1899-1902) and subsequently served in India as Assistant Director of Medical Services at Peshawar (now in Pakistan). Retiring from the army, he settled in Cape Town in 1924 and spent part of his retirement pursuing his archaeological interests on the Cape Peninsula. He was both a founder member and the first President of the South African Archaeological Society (1945-46).

Additional information Goodwin 1926a; Malan 1939.

Heanley, T. W.

Sites: Mafikeng.

The only information available about Mr Heanley is that he was living near Liss in Hampshire at the time of the donation of the handaxe to the British Museum in 1937, and that he had been at the railway station at Mafeking on 11 Feb. 1936 when he found the implement.

Hewitt, Dr John 1880-1961

Sites: Cape Padrone.

Primarily a biologist with an international reputation in herpetology and entomology, Hewitt was born in England and worked as a teacher after leaving Cambridge. He was Curator of the Kuching Museum, Sarawak, between 1905 and 1909 and moved to South Africa in 1909 to work at the Transvaal Museum in Pretoria. The following year he was appointed Director of the Albany Museum in Grahamstown (Eastern Cape Province, South Africa), a position which he held until 1958. He pioneered systematic archaeological excavation in the Eastern Cape, working inter alia at both the type sites of the Wilton and the Howieson's Poort industries (Hewitt 1921; Hewitt & Stapleton 1927). He was President of the South African Archaeological Society from 1948 to 1949.

Additional information Dictionary of South African Biography 4: 232-233.

Hillier, Dr Alfred P. 1858-1911

Sites: Buffalo River Drift; Buffalo (River) Shell Mound; Cape Flats; East London.

Having first gone to South Africa from Britain to learn ostrich farming, Hillier graduated from the University of Cape Town in 1877 and then obtained medical training at Edinburgh University. After working as a doctor in Britain he returned to South Africa and worked as a surgeon in both East London (Eastern Cape Province) and Kimberley (Northern Cape Province). He was President of the South African Medical Congress in 1893 and a member of the Johannesburg-based Reform Committee in 1895-96 involved with the attempt by Cecil Rhodes and Dr Jameson to invade and take over the South African Republic. For his participation in the Jameson Raid of 1896 he was imprisoned in Pretoria, but returned to Britain on his release in 1897. Hillier (1898) published an account of his experiences of the Jameson Raid, including a reprint of an earlier work on 'The Antiquity of Man in South Africa' (1890). Elected Member of Parliament for Hitchin in 1910, he committed suicide the following year.

Hobley, Charles W. 1867-1947

Sites: Sawmills.

A geologist who worked with the Imperial British East African Company in 1890 during the initial British acquisition of Kenya. He subsequently held several positions within the East African Civil Service and was a member of the East African Protectorate's Legislative Council from 1912 to 1920. After his retirement and return to Britain he served on the Councils of the Geological Society, the Royal Geographical Society and the Royal Anthropological Institute and was Vice President of the Geological Society in 1930. His collection was donated to the British Museum in 1947 by his daughter, Frances,

Jansen, François J. 1869-1930

Sites: Victoria West.

Born at Graaf-Reinet, Jansen became Magistrate of the Victoria West District in what is now South Africa's Northern Cape Province and collected mainly in this area. His one published work (Jansen 1926) described the Victoria West technique in detail and he also collaborated with C. H. T. D. Heese and A. J. H. Goodwin in further investigations (Goodwin & Van Riet Lowe 1929).

Jones, Rev. Dr. Neville 1880-1954

Sites: Alexandersfontein; Bambata Cave; Barkly West; De Kiel Oost; Ematjeni River; Embushini; Hope Fountain; Inyati; Inyati (Huckle's Farm); Jacobsdal; Leeuwfontein; Petrus; Sawmills; Taung; Turk Mine.

Born in Britain, Jones was ordained in 1909 and was appointed a missionary at Hope Fountain near Bulawayo in 1912. His archaeological interests began to develop with his discovery of an important Early Stone Age site at the Mission the following year and he went on to play the leading role in the early development of Stone Age archaeology in Zimbabwe. He discovered and then excavated at Bambata Cave in 1919 (Arnold & Jones 1919) and returned there in 1929 in collaboration with A. L. Armstrong and at the invitation of the University of Cape Town and the British Association for the Advancement of Science. He was the first archaeologist to identify the Middle Stone Age in Zimbabwe, but also worked in South Africa, excavating at the key Iron Age site of Mapungubwe in 1933 (Fouché 1937). In 1936 he was appointed Keeper of Prehistory of the National Museum of Southern Rhodesia and his collections formed the initial basis of its archaeological exhibits. He was also largely responsible for the creation of the Southern Rhodesian Monuments Commission, as well as author of the first overall surveys of Zimbabwean prehistory (N. Jones 1926, 1949). He served as President of the South African Archaeological Society 1953-54.

Kenny, W. H.

Sites: Charter District; Gweru Kopje; Shangani.

A prospector active in what is now Zimbabwe at the end of the nineteenth/beginning of the twentieth centuries (N. Jones 1949: 10). His material came to the British Museum by transfer from both Bulawayo Museum (1921) and the Geological Museum (1989).

Kenyon, Dame Kathleen M. 1906-1978

Sites: Paarl.

Educated at Oxford, Kenyon assisted Gertrude Caton-Thompson (1931) in her 1929 excavations at Great Zimbabwe conducted on behalf of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. She subsequently worked as secretary of the Institute of Archaeology in London (1935-48) and was its acting Director from 1942 to 1946. She lectured in Palestinian archaeology at the University of London from 1948 to 1962 and was director of the British School of Archaeology at Jerusalem between 1951 and 1966, with major programmes of research at Jericho and Jerusalem to her credit (1960, 1967). Following her retirement from London, she became Principal of St. Hugh's College, Oxford in 1962 until 1973. While there she was instrumental in securing funding for a Research Fellowship in Archaeology, which provided the financial basis on which the College decided in 1994 to create a Tutorial Fellowship in Archaeology linked with Oxford University's Lecturership in African Prehistory (one of the few teaching positions designated for African archaeology within the United Kingdom).

Kettlewell, Rev. Percy W. H. 1868-1950

Sites: Alicedale; Kasouga River; Sugar Loaf Hill; Wilton Large Rock Shelter.

Educated at Oxford, Kettlewell was ordained an Anglican priest in 1896. He became Headmaster of St. Andrews College, a leading private school in Grahamstown (Eastern Cape Province) in 1909, a position he held for 24 years. Following his retirement from the College, he became Vicar of Bucksland, Aylesbury, in England (1934-44) and Canon Emeritus of Grahamstown Cathedral (1945-50). He organised a transfer of material from the Albany Museum to the British Museum in 1922.

Additional information Who Was Who 4: 636; Dictionary of South African Biography, 5.

King, Rev. Fr. Edward 1874-1936

Sites: Driefontein.

Born in England, King was ordained as a priest of the Society of Jesus in 1908 and taught at Hodder School until 1921. He then spent 15 years as the editor of the Zambezi Mission Record and the Missionary Magazine and three years as editor of the Jesuit Directory. He played an important part in missionary conferences in the late 1920s and was Chairman of the Joint Committee for Foreign Missions in 1930. He toured Zimbabwe between October 1931 and October 1932 and presumably met Father Gardner at that time. A letter from Gardner dated 22nd January 1931 (Ethnographic document 20) records that Gardner had sent two cases of stone implements found at Felixburg to Rome for exhibition at the Vatican and it is possible that this is the source of the material that King donated to the British Museum.

Lamplugh, G. W. 1859-1926

Sites: Matetsi Valley.

A business man and amateur geologist until the age of 33, Lamplugh turned professional in 1892, joining the Geological Survey of Great Britain. He rose to become its Assistant Director between 1914 and 1920 and was also President of the Geological Society from 1918 until 1920. His main research was on glaciology, but he also investigated the geology and archaeology of the Victoria Falls area during the visit to southern Africa of the British Association for the Advancement of Science in 1905 (Lamplugh 1905a, 1905b).

Layard, Edgar L. 1824-1900

Sites: Cape Flats; Cape of Good Hope.

Layard followed his father's footsteps into the Ceylon Civil Service and was called to the bar there in 1846. He moved to the Cape Colony in 1855 as Private Secretary to Sir George Grey, its then Governor, and later moved with him to New Zealand. He returned to the Cape in 1862 as Arbitrator for cases brought under treaties regulating the suppression of the slave trade and became a judge in 1867 before being transferred to the Consular Service. There he was both the first British administrator of Fiji and later Consul in New Caledonia (1876-90). While in Cape Town he founded and became the first curator of the precursor of the South African Museum, publishing accounts of its mammalian and ornithological collections, as well as writing on archaeology (Layard 1870). He was a friend of T. H. Bowker and brother to Sir Henry Austin Layard, who pioneered the study of Assyrian archaeology (Daniel 1975).

Lee Doux, James A.

Sites: Windsorton.

Author of a paper reporting on his finds in the Vaal gravels (Lee Doux 1914), no further biographical information on this individual has come to light.

Leith, Dr George 1852-1903

Sites: Mossel Bay; Mossel Bay Flats; Pretoria; Pretoria (Arcadia); Pretoria (Camp Gravels); Pretoria (Meintjeskop); Pretoria (Muckleneuk); Pretoria (Wonderboom).

Born in Scotland, Leith came to South Africa in 1879 as a teacher, but subsequently established himself as a farmer and then as a lawyer (B. Leith 1964). He was introduced to archaeology by Kannemeyer (1890) and was prompted by him to excavate at Cape St. Blaize Cave, Mossel Bay to vindicate Dr Atherstone's views that shell-rich deposits there were of human origin. He subsequently excavated shell middens in rock-shelters at East London and then moved to Pretoria where he settled as an attorney in 1889. As well as collecting stone artefacts and eoliths there, he was also a member of the committee that founded the Pretoria Museum in 1897, and the Transvaal correspondent of The Scotsman during and after the Second South African War of 1899-1902. He gave some artefacts to the Royal Anthropological Institute in 1898, others were donated to the British Museum, or were acquired later as part of the Sturge Collection (see Chapter 3, pp. 25-26). Professor Rupert Jones noted that Leith had also collected stone tools from Swaziland (1898).

Levisieur, Max 1884-1959

Sites: De Puts.

Son of a prominent German-born businessman who settled in Bloemfontein and was instrumental in establishing the National Museum in Bloemfontein, Levisieur served in the 2nd Imperial Light Hussars during the First World War. He trained and worked as a civil engineer and later moved to Germiston, near Johannesburg. In addition to collecting stone artefacts from De Puts Farm, he was the first person to report their presence at Fauresmith (qv). His collection was donated to the British Museum by his father, Moritz Levisieur, in 1919.

Additional information Goodwin & Van Riet Lowe 1929.

Liepner, Nicholas

Sites: Messina Copper Mine.

Lyell, Sir Charles 1797-1875

Sites: Grahamstown; Kleinemonde.

Educated at Oxford, Lyell was introduced to geology by William Buckland, Dean of Christ Church, but was called to the bar in 1825. He retired from the law two years later to pursue geology full-time, becoming President of the Geological Society in 1835. Without doubt one of the leading scientists of his time, he received public recognition through a Knighthood in 1848 and conferment of a Baronetcy in 1864. His Principles of Geology (Lyell 1830-33) demonstrated the overwhelming strength of evidence in support of a uniformitarian, rather than a catastrophic, paradigm of geological history. An early convert to Darwin's theory of evolution by natural selection, he summarized archaeological evidence for human antiquity in The Antiquity of Man (Lyell 1864).

Additional information Dictionary of National Biography, pp. 319-324.

McKay, George R.

Sites: East London; East London (British Kaffraria).

McKay published two accounts of his fieldwork in the East London area (McKay 1896, 1897; Hillier 1898), but no specifically biographical information on him has thus far come to light. He was, however, one of the earliest collectors of stone artefacts and excavators of Stone Age sites in southern Africa (Binneman 1990).

The geologist Henry W. Piers, Curator of the South African Museum in Cape Town during the 1890s, was instrumental in arranging for the donation of some of McKay's material to the Geological Museum in 1867. That material was subsequently transferred to the British Museum in 1989 and includes a hand-drawn and coloured map of the area which McKay investigated (Fig. 13, p. 62).

Matley, Dr Charles A. 1866-1947

Sites: Khami.

Having completed a B.Sc. in geology at the University of London, Matley entered the Civil Service, retiring from the Indian Finance Department in 1920. Throughout his career he maintained his geological interests and was Lecturer in Geology at the Birmingham and Midland Institute between 1898 and 1902. Although his principal research was conducted in Gwynedd, north Wales, he travelled extensively after his retirement and between 1932 and 1933 led an expedition to India to search for dinosaur fossils. His material from Khami was donated to the British Museum via Dr W. N. Edwards, later Keeper of Geology at the British Museum (Natural History).

Newall, Robert S. 1884-1978

Sites: Muden.

Born in England, Newall's first archaeological activities were undertaken as a teenager at Camp Hill, South Newton. He became interested in ethnography during a world tour in 1909 and after the First World War devoted himself primarily to the archaeology of Wiltshire. He excavated at Stonehenge with Colonel Hawley between 1919 and 1926 (Newall 1929a, 1929b, 1956) and rediscovered and excavated the Aubrey holes at the site. He had a long association with Salisbury Museum, becoming a Trustee in 1937 and Vice-President in 1971. He assisted H. Cookson to donate his collection.

Orpen, Francis H. S. 1824-1893

Sites: Douglas ?

Born in Ireland, Orpen emigrated to south Africa for health reasons in 1844. Training as a surveyor, he was appointed in 1852 to assist in land surveys of the Orange River Sovereignty. After its abandonment by Britain in 1854 and the establishment of the Orange Free State republic, he settled on the farm Sinclair near Douglas and developed the surrounding area for settlement in 1867, becoming Magistrate and Civil Commissioner. After the discovery of diamonds he promoted British annexation of Griqualand West and became the territory's Magistrate and Surveyor-General in 1871, surveying the boundary line with the Free State that left the diamond diggings under British control. He later served as member of the House of Assembly for Barkly West (1881-83) and was a Fellow of both the Royal Astronomical Society and the Royal Geographical Society.

Maria Wilman recorded only that she obtained from 'Orpen' the material from Douglas which she donated in 1930. While the name 'Orpen' could refer to any member of the family, it is most likely that the original collector was Francis Orpen given the date of the donation and geographic location of the findspot.

Although Francis is the most likely donor of the Douglas material, his brother Joseph (1828-1923) also worked in South Africa where he developed ethnographic interests. Joseph was the British Government's official mediator with King Moshoeshoe I of the Basotho between 1862 and 1868, writing a history of the Basotho (Orpen 1857), and subsequently served as Magistrate of No Man's Land (East Griqualand) from 1873 to 1875. In the course of travelling through the Lesotho highlands in 1873 he visited several key archaeological sites and recorded unique information on the myths and legends of the Maluti Bushmen (Orpen 1874). He was the Cape Colony's Agent in Basutoland between 1881 and 1883 before Lesotho reverted to Imperial control, represented three different Eastern Cape seats in the Colonial House of Assembly and in 1896 moved to Zimbabwe where he was Surveyor-General of Rhodesia until his retirement in 1903.

Passmore Edwards Museum

Sites: Burgersdorp; Cape Flats; Karrieput.

Péringuey, Louis A. 1855-1924

Sites: Stellenbosch (Bosman's Crossing).

Born in Bordeaux, France, Péringuey fought in the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-71 and then took a Master's degree in Science, collecting plant and animal specimens for French museums in Senegal, Gambia and Madagascar. He emigrated to South Africa in 1879 to teach French at the South African College, Cape Town and joined the staff of the South African Museum in 1884. After ten years as Assistant Director, he became Director of the Museum in 1906, a position that he held until his death. He simultaneously served briefly as Inspector of Vineyards (from 1885) and Colonial Viticulturalist (from 1889), returning to France to research phylloxera, which severely attacked the Cape's vineyards at this time. His archaeological interests developed from about 1890, possibly from contacts with Kannemeyer (1890) and he located in situ Acheulean artefacts at Stellenbosch (qv) in 1899. His The Stone Ages in South Africa (Péringuey 1911) was one of the first synthetic treatments of southern African prehistory.

Piers, Henry W.

Sites: East London.

A geologist who served as Curator of the South African Museum in Cape Town in the early 1890s, Piers published brief accounts of the geology and archaeology of the Cape Peninsula (Piers 1871, 1873). Correspondence in the British Museum dating to June 18th 1867 shows that Piers was instrumental in arranging for the transfer to British institutions of some of the finds made by McKay in the East London area.

Read, Sir Charles H. 1857-1929

Sites: Shangani River; Simondium (Vriedeslust Farm).

Read was put in charge of the Christy Collection in 1874, having previously worked as secretary to R. Smith at what later became the Victoria and Albert Museum. He was appointed Assistant Keeper in the Department of British and Medieval Antiquities at the British Museum in 1880 and succeeded Sir Augustus Franks as Keeper in 1896. He took an important part in expanding the ethnographic collections of the Museum, as well as in publicizing them by writing several guides and catalogues, among them Antiques from Benin (1899). He also founded the first Friends of the British Museum and served as President of several learned societies: Section H of the British Association for the Advancement of Science (1899); the Royal Anthropological Institute (1899-1901 and 1917-19); and the Society of Antiquaries of London (1908-14 and 1919-24).

Robertson, (Robinson) W. D.

Sites: Burgersdorp.

Rothwell, P.

Sites: Vogelstruisfontein Farm.

Correspondence in the PEE archives shows Rothwell to have been present in London in 1890 when he was introduced to Sir Augustus Franks, at that time Keeper of the Department of British and Medieval Antiquities. In 1893 and 1894 when back in Johannesburg he wrote to Franks several times reporting his discovery of several stone artefacts, including balls of quartz, which George Leith had compared to examples known from Scotland.

Routley, S. H.

Sites: Kimberley (Golf Links).

Mr Routley gives his address as The Diamond Corporation Ltd, London EC1 at the time of the donation in 1938. The donation was made in person by James Swan at the same time that he donated material himself. The artefact is from one of Swan's surface sites.

Seton-Karr, Captain Heywood W. 1859-1938

Sites: Christiana (Soutpansdrift); Hosluit; Soutpansdrift; Stellenbosch (Bosman's Crossing); Stillbay.

After a university education at Oxford and Florence, Seton-Karr served in the British Army in Egypt and went on to travel and explore in Africa, India and the Arctic. He collected prehistoric artefacts in many of the areas that he visited, among them Somalia, Egypt and India, as well as South Africa, publishing accounts of his adventures in a series of books and papers. It is probable that his South African material came to the British Museum as part of the Sturge Collection.

Smith, Major Frederick 1858-1933

Sites: Pienaarsrivier.

Born in England, Smith joined the British Army as a medical student and served in the ranks in both the Zulu War of 1879 and the First South African War of 1880-81. He completed his medical training in Dublin in 1889 and was commissioned as a Captain in the Royal Army Medical Corps in 1890, subsequently serving on both the North West Frontier of the Indian Empire and in Sierra Leone. He was on active service in the Second South African War of 1899-1902 and later commanded field hospitals during the First World War.

Spence, Charles

Sites: Cape of Good Hope.

Nothing is known of Charles Spence except that he donated material found at the Cape of Good Hope to the Christy Collection in 1868.

Spencer, Dr Leonard J. 1870-1959

Sites: Canteen Kopje.

Born in England, Spencer graduated from Cambridge and joined the Mineralogy Department of the British Museum of Natural History in 1894, eventually serving as the Keeper of Mineralogy between 1927 and his retirement in 1935. He was a Fellow of both the Geological Society and the Royal Society and served as President of the Mineralogical Society of Great Britain from 1936 until 1939. He attended the meeting in South Africa in 1929 of the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

Sturge, Dr. William A. 1850-1919

Sites: Cape Flats; Cape of Good Hope; Drakensberg Foothills; Grahamstown; Mossel Bay; Mossel Bay Flats; Pretoria; Pretoria (Arcadia); Pretoria (Camp Gravels); Pretoria (Meintjeskop); Pretoria (Muckleneuk); Pretoria (Wonderboom).

Having studied medicine in Bristol, London and Paris, Sturge was appointed as a physician at the Royal Free Hospital in 1877, but moved to Nice in 1881 because of his wife's deteriorating health. A man of considerable leisure, Sturge collected Greek and Etruscan art, as well as prehistoric stone artefacts. Following his return to Britain in 1907 his home in Suffolk became a centre of his Palaeolithic and Neolithic research, and he was the first President of the Prehistoric Society of East Anglia. His private collection of over 100 000 artefacts was bequeathed to the British Museum. His collection contained material from South Africa collected by several people including Elliott, Leith and Seton-Kerr. Correspondance preserved (PEE) shows that some material was purchased and others obtained by exchange.

Swan, James A. 1867-1954

Sites: Alexandersfontein; Blesmanspos; Blikfontein; Hopetown Bridge; Kimberley; Kimberley (Bultfontein); Kimberley (Boshof Road); Kimberley (Golf Links); Kimberley (Sluits); Koodoosberg Drift; Kuruman (Cotton End); Langeberg; Nooitgedacht; Pniel; Potchefstroom; Prieska; Read's Drift; Rooipoort; Silver Streams; South Africa, no further provenance; Vaal River; Witsands I; Witsands II.

Born in Scotland, Swan emigrated to South Africa in 1888 and for much of his life was employed by De Beers in Kimberley. After his retirement in 1931 he spent much of his time collecting prehistoric artefacts, mostly in the Northern Cape Province and along the South Coast of KwaZulu-Natal with a particular concentration on the Later Stone Age. Dying in a thunderstorm while collecting artefacts on the open veld at the age of 87, he bequeathed investments to the University of Oxford that form the basis of the Swan Fund, which has been, and continues to be, a major support for Stone Age archaeological research in southern Africa.

Thomasset, Hans P. 1862-1949

Sites: Bushmans River (KwaZulu-Natal); Weenen.

Though a godson of Hans Christian Anderson, the Danish author, Thomasset was born in England and emigrated to South Africa before 1895. An engineer, he quarried lime at Sterkfontein for several years after 1895, discovering the fossil-bearing breccias that were subsequently made famous by the presence in them of the remains of Australopithecus africanus. As well as having an interest in archaeology and palaeontology, he was also an amateur malacologist and retired to farm at Weenen in Kwazulu-Natal.

Additional information Goodwin & Van Riet Lowe (1929).

Thurburn, Capt. Henry 1826-1897

Sites: Hout Bay; Port Beaufort.

Born in Egypt, Thurburn was educated in Britain and joined the East India Company as a military officer in 1842. He saw active service there, leaving in 1859 because of ill-health and retiring from the army in 1861 to live in Scotland.

Additional information McKannand (1967).

Trechmann, Charles T. 1885-1964

Sites: Coega; Zwartkops River.

A British-born chemist and invertebrate palaeontologist, Trechmann also had interests in archaeology and was a member of the Prehistoric Society from 1935. Following the sale of his family business he travelled widely making important contributions to the study of the geology of New Zealand and the Caribbean in particular.

Additional information Fleming & Westoll (1964).

Trevor, Major Tudor G. 1865-1954

Sites: Steynsdorp.

Born in Wales, and a graduate of the Royal School of Mines, Trevor worked briefly in Spain before emigrating to South Africa in 1887. He worked in various mining operations in the then South African Republic and travelled extensively in southern Africa. At the outbreak of the Second South African War he joined the British forces and served as an intelligence officer both then and later during the First World War in Namibia and East Africa. He was Inspector of Mines, Pretoria (with responsibility for the whole of the Transvaal outside the Rand) between 1901 and 1925 and Secretary of Mines and Works in Northern Rhodesia (now Zambia) between 1925 and 1928, when he retired to Britain. During this last post, he was responsible for sending the Kalomo cranium to Prof. Raymond Dart in Johannesburg.

Tribe, Rev. Father Reginald 1881-1945

Sites: Modderpoort.

Born in England, Tribe qualified as a doctor and worked as such before entering the priesthood in 1912. He served as a Captain in the Royal Army Medical Corps in the First World War and became Director of the Society of the Sacred Mission in 1925, a position he occupied until his death. During this time he visited South Africa eight times between 1926 and 1937. Although there is little to suggest that he personally had an interest in archaeology, the Society had two priorities at Modderpoort. It seems likely that it was one of the incumbents of these missions who actually collected the artefacts that Tribe donated to the British Museum (P. Hughes, in litt. 5/8 1996). PEE archives preserve a sketch map of the find-area.

Van Alphen, J. G. 1875-1944

Sites: Pniel; Vaal River; Windsorton; Worcester.

Following an initial appointment as a Dutch interpreter in the District Court at Grahamstown, Van Alphen served as Magistrate in several districts of the then Cape Colony/Cape Province between 1901 and 1935, Worcester among them. With a life-long interest in South African prehistory, he was involved with the discovery of the Canteen Kopje skull and collected stone artefacts from several localities, publishing two brief articles on the subject (Van Alphen 1930).

Van Heerden, Dr. Petronella A. 1887-1975

Sites: Bloemfontein; Brakfontein; Buffelsjag; Fishhoek; Harrismith; Hermanus; Paarl; Stellenbosch; Villiersdorp.

Born in the Free State, Van Heerden studied at Stellenbosch and then in Amsterdam, becoming the first Afrikaner woman to qualify as a doctor. She returned to South Africa in 1916 and worked in Bloemfontein and Harrismith before reading for a doctorate in gynaecology at Amsterdam, a thesis she completed in 1923. She settled in Cape Town in 1924 and, as well as practising as a gynaecologist, played an active part in the struggle for women's suffrage and in the National Party. Her contacts with the British Association for the Advancement of Science led to her visiting Caton-Thompson's (1931) excavations at Great Zimbabwe in 1929 and she subsequently worked on Dorothy Garrod's excavations at Wadi el-Mughara on Mount Carmel, Israel, in 1931. Retiring to a farm in Harrismith in 1942, she travelled extensively through the Free State with the Abbé Breuil on his visit to South Africa in 1949.

Van Riet Lowe, Prof. Clarence 1894-1954

Sites: Canteen Kopje; Sheppards Island.

Born in South Africa and educated in Bloemfontein and Cape Town, Van Riet Lowe saw military service in the First World War and became interested in archaeology while collecting handaxes in Egypt. He went on to study engineering at the University of Cape Town and from 1923 worked in the Free State, combining his career with the location and collection of archaeological materials. Much of this experience was pooled with that of A. J. H. Goodwin to produce Stone Age Cultures of South Africa (Goodwin & Van Riet Lowe 1929). Having served as President of Section E of the South African Association for the Advancement of Science in 1931, he was appointed the first Director of the Bureau of Archaeology (later the Archaeological Survey) in 1934. He simultaneously held a Chair in Archaeology at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, served as Secretary of the National Monuments Commission and was President of the South African Archaeological Society in 1952.

Author of numerous papers, among his other principal contributions were his work with Wayland on the prehistory and Pleistocene geology of Uganda (Wayland & Van Riet Lowe 1952), the identification of the Smithfield Culture (Goodwin & Van Riet Lowe 1929) and the archaeological survey of the Little Caledon and Vaal River Valleys (Van Riet Lowe 1937, 1952b, 1956). His material was transferred from the Institute of Archaeology, London, to the British Museum in 1989.

Walsh, T.

Sites: Bushman's River.

Joint donor of artefacts collected by H. P. Thomasset at Weenen, KwaZulu-Natal, there is a remote possibility that he was the latter's illegally adopted son, who is mentioned, but never named, in extant correspondence in the British Museum's archives (Ethno).

Wansborough, Ivon S. d. 1951

Sites: Ngwaritsi River.

English by birth, Wansborough was a school teacher who later emigrated to South Africa.

Ward, Penelope F. A.

Sites: Barberton; Carnarvondale Farm; Carnarvondale (Bushy Park site); Carnarvondale (Hillary site); Carnarvondale (Van Riet Lowe site); Carnarvondale (Woodbury site).

Warren, S. Hazzledine

Sites: Derré.

Well-known British archaeologist and geologist who donated his massive archaeological collection to the British Museum in 1958. How he acquired this single artefact from Mozambique is unknown.

Wayland, Edward J. 1888-1966.

Sites: Monapo River.

British by birth, Wayland studied as an architect and only later as a geologist, collecting his first stone artefacts in Cheddar Gorge, England, in 1901. Before the First World War he had worked for mining companies in Egypt, Mozambique (Wayland 1915) and Sri Lanka. Sent to Uganda to prospect for minerals useful for Britain's war effort, he remained there as Director of the Geological Survey for 20 years, though he briefly studied archaeology at Cambridge during this period. After further military service in the Second World War, he was sent to Botswana in 1943 and became Director of the Bechuanaland Geological Survey. In addition to the few artefacts from Mozambique included in the present Catalogue, Wayland located numerous archaeological sites in East Africa, excavating some of them, notably Nsongezi (Wayland & Van Riet Lowe 1952), and also wrote on Botswanan prehistory (Wayland 1954).

Whitaker, William 1836-1925

Sites: Cape of Good Hope.

A British geologist who spent most of his career (1857-96) working in the Geological Survey of England and was also President of the Geology Society (1898-1900) and of the Geologists' Association (1901-02; 1920-21). His work was almost exclusively concentrated in the south-east of England.

White, Franklin 1850-1928

Sites: Bechuana Province (?); Griqualand West; Griquatown; Khami; Matopos Cave 1; Matopos Cave 2; Plumtree; Simondium; Steynsdorp.

Born in England, White worked as a mining engineer in Colombia before emigrating to South Africa in 1889 to assume the management of a number of gold mines in the then South African Republic. A member of the Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, he published papers on aspects of gold mining and travelled in South Africa as well as Australia before settling in Zimbabwe. He was the first person to report the presence there of prehistoric stone artefacts (at Khami, qv) and the first to excavate a Stone Age site in Zimbabwe (White 1905). He subsequently also worked at the early hominid site of Broken Hill Cave in Zambia, from which he collected faunal remains (J. D. Clark, pers. comm.).

White, Maj-Gen. Henry G. 1835-1906

Sites: Bechuana Province (?); Griqualand West.

With a long military career behind him in the Crimean War, the Indian Mutiny and the British occupation of Cyprus in 1878, White commanded the 1st Battalion The Royal Scots in the 1884 expedition that annexed the area south of the Molopo River to Britain's South African territories as the Colony of British Bechuanaland. White retired from the army in 1886.

Additional information Who Was Who 1: 757.

White, Very Rev. Ralph L. d. 1954

Sites: Pietermaritzburg.

Educated at Oxford, White was ordained in 1896 and served as a chaplain to British forces in South Africa between 1901 and 1903. He went on to hold a variety of ecclesiastical appointments that culminated in his being Dean and Vicar of St. Saviours Parish, Pietermaritzburg between 1929 and 1934. He subsequently returned to Britain where he also worked as a priest.

Wigram, Eliza R. 1838-1899

Sites: Mbabane River.

Museum records refer to this lady having expressed an interest in donating ethnographic specimens from Zululand in 1895, two years before a similar request relating to the Wigram Collection from Mbabane River was made by her sister Miss H. Wigram (1829-1908) of Bransfield, Godstone, Surrey. Though no further details are available, it is possible that the two ladies had travelled and/or lived in southeastern southern Africa. Several of their cousins served in the British Army during the Second South African War of 1899-1902, but the connection (if any) between this and the Mbabane River material remains unclear.

Additional information Wigram (1913).

Wilman, Maria 1867-1957

Sites: Alexandersfontein; Amantia; Douglas; Kimberley; Newlands; Pniel.

Born in Cape Town, Wilman read Natural Sciences at Cambridge and on her return to South Africa was employed in the Geological Survey at Cape Town. Having returned to Cambridge to study botany, she then worked with L. Péringuey (qv) in Cape Town before helping to found the McGregor Museum in Kimberley in 1908. She was its first Director and held this position until her retirement in 1946. She carried out research in botany and geology, as well as archaeology, travelling into the Kalahari with Dorothea Bleek in 1910-11 to study the Naron Bushmen (Bleek 1928) and recording rock paintings in Lesotho around the same time (Wilman 1911). Rock art was one of her major interests and she produced the first systematic study of rock-engravings in the Northern Cape Province (Wilman 1933).

Wilson, K. G. & Wilson, R. W.

Sites: Middeldrift.

Little is known about these two brothers except that they were living at Middeldrift at the time of the donation in 1926. A letter from them dated 1/12/25 is contained in the PEE 'Paeolithic-Neolithic Scrapbook'.
