Back to the beginning: Athena's birth

Go to Room 18 on Google Street view

The East pediment showed the birth of the goddess Athena from the head of her father Zeus.

Zeus was the father of Athena and her mother was Metis, which means wisdom.

Zeus was told before Athena was born, that any child born to Metis would be more powerful than its father.

Zeus was very worried by this and decided to swallow Metis before she could give birth to the child.

Sometime later Zeus began to have terrible headaches. The pain got so bad that Zeus asked Hephaistos to cut his head open to see what was wrong.

When Hephaistos opened his head, Athena emerged from Zeus' skull, fully grown and dressed for battle.

The battle between the Centaurs and Lapiths

Stay in Room 18

The legend of the battle between the Centaurs and the Lapiths is shown on the carvings above the Parthenon columns.

The Centaurs

The Lapiths

The legend goes that the centaurs were invited to the wedding of King Pirithous of the Lapiths and Hippodameia.

The centaurs drank a lot of wine, and as Pirithous and Hippodameia were about to be wed the centaur Eurytion jumped up and tried to run off with the bride.

This caused a great battle between the rest of the centaurs and the Lapiths.

The Lapiths won the battle and drove the centaurs from their lands.

This challenge looks at the Athenian community in procession, honouring the goddess Athena on her birthday. Each long procession was led by chariots and included elders, musicians, priests and priestesses, tray bearers and citizens bearing gifts. The main gift for Athena was the Peplos, a sacred robe, which was taken to the temple.
